Islanders urged to follow COVID-19 travel advisories Oct 11 2020

Prince Edward Island's Chief Public Health Officer, Dr. Heather Morrison, has confirmed two new unrelated positive cases of COVID-19 for the province and urges Islanders to follow New Brunswick COVID-19 travel advisories.

New Brunswick public health officials have confirmed 57 new cases of COVID-19 in the past five days, most related to outbreaks in the Moncton and Campbellton regions. Non-essential travel to these regions is being strongly discouraged.

Islanders returning from travel to the Moncton and Campbellton regions of New Brunswick should:

- wear a mask at all times when outside of their household for the next two weeks;
- monitor themselves for symptoms of COVID-19, and visit a Drop-in Testing Clinic to be tested if symptoms develop;
- avoid public places, unless it is essential;
- avoid large gatherings; and,
- minimize contact with individuals outside of their close circle of contacts and household.

New Brunswick details outdoor mask rules for Moncton, Campbellton areas Posted: Oct 12, 2020

The rule was first announced Friday for the Campbellton and Moncton health zones, but no details were initially provided. It was announced as the province moved both regions back to the "orange" recovery phase that limits what businesses can open, the size of gatherings, but allows two households to bubble together.

An updated version of the province's emergency declaration order was issued Monday. The order says masks are mandatory in outdoor locations where people can gather, such as streets, sidewalks, public squares, parks, playgrounds, markets, festival sites, dog parks and walking trails.

Masks aren't required in the yard of a single-family home.

It's also not required while walking, jogging, running, cycling, or at rest alone or with a member of their household bubble. However, if a person is to likely come within two metres of someone from outside their bubble, they must wear a mask.
