Omicron arrives in N.L. as provincial government prepares for rapid border testing

Newfoundland and Labrador is reporting its first case of the Omicron variant of COVID-19.

The case is in the Eastern Health region of the province, and is connected to a person who travelled to the province from within Canada, said Dr. Janice Fitzgerald, the province's chief medical officer of health, on Wednesday. The person is in isolation and further spread is not anticipated, she said.

Omicron variant identified in PEI; new temporary public health measures; three new cases of COVID-19

December 14, 2021

Chief Public Health Officer, Dr. Heather Morrison, has confirmed one case of the Omicron variant in PEI. The National Microbiology Lab in Winnipeg has identified the case linked to the Omicron variant as one associated with the outbreak at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish.

As an added layer of protection to reduce risk of importation and transmission, effective 8:00 am on Friday, December 17 until early January the following temporary measures will be in place:...
